shocking Case of Wife-Murder and Suicide-The Labor Candidate-Crop Reports.

REPUBLICAN POLICY. A Tariff Bill to be Prepared as a Substi-support of all the Republicans of the House. To put such a bill together requires considerable labor, no little part of which is the consultation by members to obtain their ideas—or, more truthfully, to enable us to steer clear of deiments. enable us to steer clear of doing anything that will be injurious to industries in meinbers' districts. No, the matter has not been taken up in caucus yet, because the time has not come when we felt it necessary or expedient, but when the proper time arrives the bill, I think, will be in shape." "Then you do not intend to accept the proposition made by Mills to abandon the hve-minute rule and vote on the bill as it yet. While it has been discussed, and at length, we have been unable to reach any decision as to what line of action is best to pursue for our party. Personally, I do not think Mills' proposition will be accepted. No, not because of any kickers in the party, but because there are strong reasons why the Republicans should not allow it to go through without a full and free dis ion. No Republican caucus has been called yet, as far as I know, and my under-standing is that we are to hold off and let the Democrats take the initiative in every-thing, at least for the present."

Copyright, 1888, by the California Associated Press. Washington, May 20th .- The proposition of Mills to abandon the five-minute rule and vote on his bill, as it now stands, rule and vote on his bill, as it now stands, is being severely commented upon by the protection Democrats. Among them there is but one verdict, and that is that it is a but one verdict, and that is that it is a like the submerged village of Alexandria, Mo., today.

The owner of a clothing store has remode his goods to the second story of his have been unable to come to any agreement. Congressman Vance, of Connecticut, who is generally credited with reflecting the views of Mr. Randall and the protection element of the Democratic party. said that the acceptance of Mills' proposi-tion to shut off any chance to amend his bill and vote upon it as it stood meant its certain defeat. He said to your corre-

THE CROPS. Cold Weather East of the Rockies Re

tards Young Grain, Etc. WASHINGTON, May 20th.-The weather crop bulletin for the week says the reports indicate that throughout the Southern States the weather has been generally favorable for growing crops, although more rain is needed. The cool nights have re-tarded the growth of young cotton, which is, however, reported in good condition. In the grain region of the Northwest and the Ohio valley cold weather during the week has prevented any marked improvement in the crop condition, notwithstand-ing an abundance of rain in those sections. Damaging frosts occurred from Michigan southward to northern Alabama. Reports from Minnesota state that the weather conditions have generally been favorable for crops, though too cold for rapid growth. Reports from Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri indicate that the weather during the week has been favorable for small grain, but unfavorable for corn, vegetables and fruit.

LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT. en Explains the Situation Regarding the Papal Rescript.

LONDON, May 20th .- William O'Brien meeting of the Catholic Parnellite members of Parliament on Thursday, said: To any person fully informed as to the history and organization of the Roman Catholic Church, the excitement produced by the publica-Well-Connected Scapegraces.

Washington, May 20th.—A prize fight took place near Gaithersburg, Md., to-day between Lindgren and Berry Adams. The congregation of the Holy Office, fight was according to the control of the congregation of the Holy Office, to which the reports of Monsignor Persico on the condition of Ireland were referred by Pope Leo XIII., is one of the many committees of the College of Cardinals, and it is also one of the least authoritative. In olden days the Holy Office was synonymous with the inquisition, and even now its functions are purely inquisitional, not judicial. To the Congregation of the Holy Office the Pontiff usually refers any appeal made to him for a decision or advice in purely secular affairs. For instance, to day in some Catholic countries—say in Belgium, where an anti-clerical party exists— some law anti-Catholic in spirit may be proposed by the politicians, and submitted to the people for a decision at the general election. If the Bishops are in doubt about the attitude their flocks should assume of the question, they state their reasons for their doubts, and are also supposed to state the other side of the question, in especially sending their statement to Rome. CONGREGATION OF THE HOLY OFFICE. The Congregation of the Holy Office confrom all parts of the country. Fully 10,000 people were on the grounds to-day.

An Actual Act siders it and the Pope promulgates the measures, but his approval or condemna-tion possesses no authority, unless it is based upon some question of faith or morals already defined. The distinction between any rescript or bull dealing with matters of politics and any decree dealing with matters of the Catholic faith or Christian morals, is so well understood by the most unlettered Catholics in Ireland that very little attention is paid by laymen to such decrees as the pronunciamento of the "plan of campaign." On a political question Rome and Ireland have been at variance before, when Henry II. assumed Australia. Lieutenant Marix has been selected by Secretary Whitney to represent the Government at the Melbourne Expositive Government Go eminent theologian, Bishop Doyle, in his evidence before the committee of the House of Lords and in his published writings, maintained that the Pope had no and Mrs. Senator Hearst. Miss Aldich, the government in these countries, and he remained a Bishop uncondemned by Rome.

THE CONDEMNATION OF FENIANISM. Pio Nono was induced to condemn Fenanism as a secret society, yet one Archbishop and several priests refused to consider membership of the Fenian organization as an offense against either faith or morals, and were not reproved by the Holy | California.

Theoretically it is held that a secret society is bad because it is secret. Nevertheless it is held by Roman canonists that unless the objects are antagonistic to the faith or moral law, or, its objects being justifiable, its methods are bad, it is not necessary to be condemned. The Knights of Labor are a secret society, but Leo XIII. Morgue to night. She was living at a Sechas refused to condemn them, yet Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, possesses full canon-place, and had a quarrel with a man named ical power to denounce the Knights of Labor at any time he may become convinced that their objects are against public morals or their methods unjustifiable. When Pio works are the same parties had a quarrel the Sheriff at Fresno to come here, as he Nono condemned Fenianism Cardinal Cullen proclaimed the Fenian organization in which the woman received a black eye, such an archdiocese as that of Dublin. Archbishop McHale quietly ignored the censure in the archdiocese of Tuam and it is not expense of the proclaimed the proclaimed the fenian organization in which the woman received a black eye. She came from placed on the land by Cripe two years ago. s notorious that members of the regular clergy-that is, the religious orders as distinct from parishional clergy—throughout Ireland disobeyed the censure by regularly granting the rites of the church to avowed Fenians. EFFECT OF THE RESCRIPT. Irrelevant as they may seem, it is necessary to keep those facts in mind in judging contracts. The Bishop or priest who promulgates the censure must be satisfied by evidence that contracts between landlord four years and eighteen months, respec ercion before he can canonically censure the plan of campaign which interferes with it. If coercion is exercised in inducing tenants to join the plan of campaign, then, if the Bishop of the diccese is satisfied on the point, he may apply the Papal censure to the plan of campaign within his diocese. Even then he cannot withhold the rites of the church from any person who adopts the plan of campaign. NOT INJURE THE NATIONAL CAUSE. Pope Leo XIII. knows very well that any censure that he may fulminate will not in-jure the Nationalist cause. In Ireland there is regret that his Holiness should have even appeared to aid the enemies of the Irish cople, but this is the only feeling that has

THE PERMANENT EXHIBITION.

The efforts now put forth to secure ex hibits for the permanent exhibition building near the depot in this city, are meeting with very gratifying success. Every county in Central and Northern California, from the coast to the Sierra summits, ought to sion, and we entertain no doubt concerning their improving of the opportunity to advertise their sections of the State in this manner. The building, which is spacious structure, in grounds to be well pires, Hamberg will be taken to Oregon to kept and made attractive, is but a few feet from the depot where all the passenger trains pause going east or coming west. These trains always stop here sufficiently long to enable tourists to visit the buildwill enable through passengers to catch no will serve to invite the stranger to stop over, or to seek another opportunity to examine the display of products. But there is a large and augmenting passenger current that pauses here for a considerable period, varying from some hours to days and weeks. There is also a large drift of travel that makes a considerable stoppage in changing from one route of travel t another, and another large class of travelers who come to the country with the specific object in view of critically exam ining into the claims of Northern and Central California upon homeseekers and investors. All these make Sacramento a central point of observation and investigation, and to these, too, the permanent exhibition will prove attractive and educating upon the resources of the counties in the waist of the State and north of it The exhibition-which will be impartial and favor no one section over anotherwill speedily advertise itself, as a free ex-

Under good management the worked out a cipher from the text of which will lift President Cleveland from the direct their steps before going out into any of the counties of the upper half of the State, for here they will be aided intelligently in formulating their plans to obtain information and to devise research into every northern and central county will therefore realize how important it is that the local representation of every inviting region should be large and exhaustive.

When the exhibition opens on the first of June it should be able to make a showing of which the people may be proud. The responses thus far made to the efforts but forth are, as already stated, very gratiing, but the counties should not wait for the appeal to be made by the exhibition agent in person-they should at once enter upon the collection and forwarding of such exhibits as will present samples of soils, wood, grains, fruits (green, dried and pre served), vegetables, berries, the flora, the grasses, minerals, etc. There should accompany all exhibits intelligent written explanation concerning the soil, whence taken, its depth, character, the methods ocultivation, average yield, specific location etc. It will be readily understood how greatly beneficial such exhibits will be. and how far they will go in educating inquirers concerning the truth about Northern and Central California.

There ought to be neither exaggeration in making exhibits, nor in the description and information accompanying them, nor should there be any concealments-the unadorned truth is what is needed; all concealment and exaggeration will result injuriously. The time is now very short before the date on which it is desirable to open the building, and it is to be hoped that the people of the north and center will act promptly and with energy in making the exhibition on the opening day very full and exceedingly attractive. While it is not expected to be born fullfledged, still it can easily be given such an impetus from the hour of its beginning that it will immediately enter upon the purpose for which it is founded with vigor, and at once justify the judgment of the public-spirited Associations that have made

[Applause on the Republican side.]

THE CHALLENGE ACCEPTED. The gentleman from Kentucky chalthe voting population, and all voting on one side. Whatever the reason for this curious arrangement may have been, the gentleman from Kentucky represents one-sixth of the votes I represent. It will be seen that the gentleman does not occupy ground that makes it prudent for him to indulge in reckless defamatory statements, eviling the honor of an election in another State, of which he actually knows nothing, even if the law of fair and honest manly dealing was not sufficient to restrain him.

> REED'S ARGUMENT. Telling Points on the Side of American Protection. Tom Reed of Maine got the floor after Baker had sat down. He began speaking and quiet was soon restored. Reed started out by saying that he proposed to tell the House what were the principles underlying the two systems under debate. The system indicated by the bill brought in by the was the leader of the Democratic party, and was also the dispenser of patronage. Since duty is taken out of the pockets of the consomer, and goes into the pockets of the manufacturer, then the whole system of protection was wrong. Protection, inci-dental or accidental, is either a great wrong or a great truth. The friends of virtue or he other side tell us that it is robbery. If that is so, their proposition is nothing more nor less than a proposition to continue the robbery under limitation. They propose, instead of giving to these robber manufacturers $47 out of every $100, to give only $40. Does that not mean that they honestly think the principle all right? I think Reed then began a systematic attack on the Mills bill, pointing out its many inconsistencies. His points were telling ones, and while he was not interrupted often by applause, it was owing to the fact that he made no attempt to speak to the gallery, but confined himself to an argument that must have been convincing to all those conversant with tariff reform

A LABORER WITHOUT MONEY OR POCKETS. Reed asked the gentlemen on the other side to consider the proposition of his (Reed's) in opposition to the proposition made by Mr. Heard of Missouri. Heard spoke of the laboring man after free trade was inaugurated buying goods in Rhode Island for the same figure they could be intend to give him.
"Now it has been said by Mills, the gen

leman from Texas chosen to lead this bill, that of $1 38 paid for a yard of cashmere 80 cents goes into the pocket of the robbe baron merchant. Now this is not so, as the duty on the article is 35 cents ad valorem. Then there is the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Russell, who is the happy possessor of so many unknown sheep. He pictured to us the merchants of our country as bankrupts if protection is not throttled, while Mr. Mills tells us that they are THE ORATOR'S kets of the world. How cool and grand SAN FRANCISCO AND VICINITY. that sounds! The markets of the world! For all this they want us to give that insig-

A DOG'S EXPERIENCE. "I want to tell you a story: There was once a dog, a good little dog, and one day he trotted along, the happiest doggie in all the world, for in his mouth he had a succulent piece of mutton. He came to a stream across which was laid a plank. He trotted upon that plank with all the lightneartedness and light-steppedness of any bride. He looked down in that clear stream and saw—what?—the markets of the world [loud and prolonged laughter]; and he dove for them, and in a moment he crawled on the bank the wettest, saddest, dirtiest and most muttonless dog you ever saw.' At the conclusion of his speech the applause was deafening and prolonged.

THE "WIND-UP."

Speaker Carlisle Closes the Debate in Support of the Bill. The reception given Speaker Carlisle when he resigned his seat this afternoon to reply to Mr. Reed was little short of an ovation, and it was not confined to the Democratic side, for the Republicans lent ready aid with their hands and feet. It was not to Carlisle as a politician, but to Carlisle as a man. He spoke for nearly two scarcely any reference to his notes, which, for the most part, lay on his desk unused. He first addressed himself to the general proposition of the day. He said that neither party was prepared to stand up and say that the time had not come when a reduction of the revenue was not an absolute necessity. Both parties admitted that. The difference, then, of the two great parties was as to the manner in which this reduction should be made. And again, neither party was prepared to stand up and what they might think was right in principle neither party was to-day contending that absolute free trade was advisable or possible. He did not believe there was a Stop and think of it: over $136,000,000 taken out of the legitimate channels of trade, and to what end? Simply to store it in the vaults of the Treasury. Why no people of the world has ever been so robbed efore. What monarch of modern time would have dared attempt such a thing The honorable gentleman from Maine, Mr. Reed, in all the brilliant speech to which this House has listened, failed to even allude to the real situation which confronts us. We have an enormous surplus, a surplus which is piling up day by day. increase must be stopped. How shall it be done? That is the question that confronts us to-day, and to which I ask all to address themselves seriously. To my mind there is nothing more dangerous to our institutions than this enormous surplus, nothing which is so threatening to good govern-ment. As I take it, we all stand united on the proposition that the Government has no right to tax the people beyond the amount needed for the just and economical afford to quarrel over the details of how this great end is to be reached, but I hold that in doing this the need of the many gentleman from the seat of Henry Clay. must not be subjugated to the needs of the few. As I take it the difference on this question is whether it is the duty of the vernment to tax only for the amount needed to run the Government, or shall it tax the many to aid private industries, for hold that every dollar taken above what s needed is taken from the pockets of the nany to enrich the few. When the tariff ill of 1857 was passed the same hue and y which is heard on all hands to-day was ised then against that bill. Its passage neant, it was said, certain death to all ou industries; ruin, failure, and dissolution would follow in the wake. Now what was the result? It was continued prosperity. renewed activity and increased enterprise. One man in 1813, working sixty hours, could turn out products worth $250; one man working sixty hours to-day, with the aid of machinery, could turn out products worth $430. The laborer to-day was just so much better of in proportion to the value of the product of his labor. A reduced tariff meant reduced prices in goods, and reduced prices in goods meant that labor would get more for the money earned, and labor was therefore better paid.

Funeral of Leonard Goss.

Leonard Goss, at one time a well-known resident of Sacramento, died at Berkeley on Thursday last, and was buried yesterday in the old Masonic plat at the City Cemetery. The funeral took place from Masonic Hall, auspices of Washington Lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M. The beautiful and impressive Masonic burial service was read by Past-Grand Master N. Greene Curtis, who took occasion to speak feelingly of the many noble qualities of deceased, who had been his warm and intimate friend for many years. Sacramento Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, furnished an escort of forty Knights, under command of Eminent Commander John W. Boyd. Deceased was formerly a member of the firm of Goss & Lambard, foundrymen, and was the first President of the Sacramento Woolen Mills. He was a very prominent Mason, and at different times held the of-Master of Washington Lodge, High Priest of Sacramento Chapter, Thrice Illustrious Master of Sacramento Council mandery. At the time of his death he was a member of Golden Gate Commandery Knights Templar, San Francisco, and Sir Knight Myron Renwick, of that body, accompanied his remains to this city.

on a charge of having robbed John Miller in the rear of a K-street saloon on Friday last. Miller swore positively that O'Brien held him while another man robbed him. He could not positively identify Morton. The people at the saloon discredited Miller's statement, and the Court did not find sufficient evidence to warrant holding the parties and they were discharged. Morton however, was an escape from the chain-gang and he was sent back to serve out his Pete McCann, the man found in Mr.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

The Criticism Upon America's Place-Names by the Late Matthew Arnold. EDS. RECORD-UNION: Your paper has made repeated allusion to the article written by the late Matthew Arnold for the Great Register, under the letter H:

ten by the late Matthew Arnold for the Nincteenth Century on the quality of the civilization professed by the United States. The fair and candid spirit in which that article is written, and the literary fame and eminence of the author, have invested it with an importance not usually accorded to the ephemeral production of British magazines.

There is much in our institutions no doubt which does not recommend them to the mind of a scholarly old-word dilettante as was the late Matthew Arnold. When, however, Mr. Arnold frames an indictment against Americans for that alleged want of taste in the bestowal of place-names, the former may palliate their shortcomings by pointing to examples of English communities who have solved the nomenclature problem even less happily than they. Appearances notwithstanding, Americans have shown more originality and good taste in their naming of places than any band of colonizers which has left the shores of the mother country. An instituting of comparisons will prove this, and as good an example as I know is furnished taste in their naming of places than any band of colonizers which has left the shores of the mother country. An insti-tuting of comparisons will prove this, and as good an example as I know is furnished by England's colonial possessions in the Southern ocean. The latter set out on their careers at a much later date in the world's history than America, and in their bestowal of place-names have had the example of this country to profit by, as well as that of England.

A reference to facts proves that the no-menclature of Australia is so cumbrous and ill-adapted to present wants that a bill has been introduced into one of the Colonial Parliament for repealing it. In the words of the London Spectator, "the settlers of New South Wales have suddenly woke HE OLDEST SAVINGS BANK IN THE up to the fact that the name of their col-Lity, corner J and Fifth streets, Sacramento. ED. R. HAMILTON, Cashier. 4ptf ony is ill-reputed, cumbrous to use, and inof view, less objectionable, but even in these instances is illustrated that barrenness and fertility of invention which Mr. Arnold would have his readers believe is confined to the American people alone. Urban and oppidan nomenclature in Australia is more uncouth and ear-offending than any which obtains in America, as SACRAMENTO, CAL.

a glance at the glossary of an Australian atlas will show. Excursiveness at the Antipodes must be at a low ebb, when the sponsor of a bush settlement has to hunt among the Balearic Islands for a name to President call his hamlet by. Compared with Ma-President jorca, "Syracuse" is preferable any day;

> Tackandandah? Where the names of places in Australia are not native and hideous, as in the examples just quoted, they are grossly imitative, showing thereby a poverty of imagination which is unpardonable. The names of half the towns in Ireland are perpetuated in Apstralia. in Australia-and such names as Melbourne, Rockingham, Keppel and Card-well, denote the servile love for an aristocratic caste, which is incompatible with those manly and independent traits which one would expect in a race of hardy colonists. What did the administration of Viscount Melbourne accomplish that the ame of the head of it should be given to a port whose commerce, even at this early stage in its history, surpasses that of and of native names, which is prettier, Pensacela or Woogaroo, Lackawanna or

The place-names prevailing in the two continents illustrate aptly the independence of thought and abhorrence of convention displayed in the one case, and the slavish spirit of imitation exhibited in the Men of leisurely habits like the late Craven scholar, are apt to overlook the fact that the pioneers of a continent have little time to cast about for mellifluous-sounding place names. The latter are imposed arbirarily, and under the pressure of occasion, with no thought of how they may sound to ears whose sense is more delicate and refined than his who clears a forest. Analyzing Mr. Arnold's objections more closely, what is there in the place names which he adduces as characteristic instances of American bad taste, to offend the sense of beauty? In the instances he cites—Briggs-ville, Jacksonville, Higginsville, etc.—does the taint of barbarism adhere in the first syllables of the names, or in their common suffix? If the former, then whatever is ure Saxon and early English is ugly, and if the latter, then the Roman villa or Nornan ville is uncouth. If a new country nust to some extent be dependent on the comenclature of an older one, are not Troy, Ilium and Athens, inunitely preferable to Windsor, Claremont and Hurlinghame? Yet because America chooses to perpetuate certain of her towns the names of classic ities, she gets a hauling over the coals, while Australia, with a borrowed nomenclature that has not even antiquity to rec ommend it, is permitted to pass uncrit-

Briggsville is not "congenial" to us any more than Los Angeles. Both are ex-tremes, between whose limits occur a hundred thousand place names remarkable for neither beauty nor ugliness. Our suffices of polis, sylvania, and ville are as defensible as the English thorp and hame, and have the authority of classic usage, as opposed to merely local and insular. The Greek polis is an excellent suffix, and when allied with a native word-instance Minne apolis, the combination makes an entirely unobjectionable place name. If Americans choose to reincubate Rome in Minnesota, or Carthage in New Mexico, the affair is their own, and English critics, of all critics Estimates sh in the world, should be the last to point out an incongruity in the custom. British Philistine, with less excuses have perpetrated far greater absurdities in Australia and Canada, than ever have the people of the United States.

The sum of the matter is that "any yord not absolutely scacophonous, or befouled by evil associations, will do as well as any other, for it is history, not foresight, which makes the name of a country great. Who knows whence Rome came, or remeant strength? Or what does it matter dence in New York, having committed s that America is but the feminine of the cide by turning on the gas in his room. odd Christian name of the obscure Florentine, who was not the first to discover the New World?
